VETERANS' SERVICE RECOGNITION BOOK

Volume Ten

Premier's Message

On behalf of the Province of Nova Scotia, I would like to thank our Nova Scotia military personnel and their families for the enormous contributions and sacrifices they have made and continue to make for our country.

Nova Scotia has a strong tradition in Canada's military. This year marks the 100th anniversary of World War I and the 70th anniversary of D-Day. Nova Scotians played an integral part in both World Wars and Nova Scotia itself served as a key strategic harbour and staging area in the Atlantic theatre. It is important that we honour and remember our sacrifices, contributions and accomplishments in the effort to protect freedom at home and promote it abroad.

The Province of Nova Scotia is proud of the women and men that serve and have served in the Canadian Forces. For this reason, I want to extend our heartfelt appreciation for the contributions that they have made and continue to make abroad and at home with their families, in communities throughout Nova Scotia.

President's Message

Comrades,

On behalf of the officers and members of Nova Scotia/Nunavut Command, it is indeed a great pleasure for me to invite you all to receive the tenth edition of our Veterans' Service Recognition Book, in which we celebrate and honour the lives of our veterans, who have served or are serving our great country, Canada, in peacetime and war.

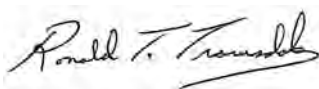

This book will be distributed to libraries and schools in our Command, thus providing an invaluable source of information for years to come.

I wish to thank all Legion Branches and individuals who assisted with this special project by sending in submissions of veterans in their community.

HELP, HELP!! IF THESE BOOKS ARE TO CONTINUE TO BE PUBLISHED, WE NEED YOUR HELP BY SENDING IN MORE SUBMISSIONS. PLEASE TREAT THIS REQUEST AS URGENT!!

I, at this time, wish to thank Comrade Steve Wessel for his hard work and dedication to this project and wish him every success in future books.

In Comradeship,

Ronald T. Trowsdale

Project Chairman's Message

As Chairman of this Veterans' Service Recognition Book series, and on behalf of the membership of Nova Scotia/Nunavut Command of The Royal Canadian Legion, it is an honour to present this special anniversary edition. Not only is this our 10th edition (10 years), we are also recognizing the 100th anniversary of the start of WWI – August 1914.

You will notice that many of the Veterans profiled in this edition served during WWI and we have included some articles featuring major battles in which these Veterans participated, which helped shape Canada's image on the world stage. Also included is a profile of one of the most recognizable monuments in the world – Vimy Ridge.

All of the books in this series are produced in an effort to honour, acknowledge and remember the lives and deeds of our Veterans. I offer my thanks to the Legion branches of The Royal Canadian Legion as well as the general public who continue to support these publications by contributing biographies and photos as well as through their generous support through donations and advertising.

I would like to extend our sincere thanks to Fenety Marketing Services for their continuing support in the production of these books and together with NS/NU Command, we look forward to issuing our 11th edition in the Fall of 2015.

If you would like to send us info on a relative of yours please use Veteran Information form at the back of this book.

In Comradeship,

Steve Wessel

About the Cover – The Vimy Memorial

In 1920, the Government of Canada announced that the Imperial War Graves Commission had awarded Canada eight sites—five in France and three in Belgium—on which to erect memorials. Each site represented a significant Canadian engagement and the Canadian government initially decided that each battlefield be treated equally and commemorated with identical monuments. In September 1920, the Canadian government formed the Canadian Battlefields Memorials Commission to discuss the process and conditions for holding a memorial competition for the sites in Europe.

Interested parties submitted 160 design drawings and of those, 17 submissions were selected to produce a plaster maquette of their respective design.

In October 1921, the commission selected the submission of Toronto sculptor and designer Walter Seymour Allward as the winner of the competition. The complexity of Allward's design precluded the possibility of duplicating the design at each site; therefore the commission revised its initial plans and decided to build two distinctive memorials and six smaller identical memorials.

At the outset, members of the commission debated where to build Allward's winning design. Committee member and former Canadian Corps commander, Lieutenant-General Arthur Currie argued in favour of the government placing the monument in Belgium on Hill 62. In the end, the commission selected Vimy Ridge as the preferred site, largely because of its elevation above the plain below.

In 1924, the Canadian Battlefields Memorials Commission hired Dr. Oscar Faber, a Danish structural engineer, to prepare foundation plans as well as provide general supervision of the foundation work.

Major Unwin Simson served as the principal Canadian engineer during the construction of the memorial and oversaw much of the daily operations at the site. Allward moved to Paris in 1925 to supervise the construction of the monument and the carving of the sculptures with construction of the memorial itself commencing in 1925.

the Canadian National Vimy Memorial in France. About 6,400 people sailed on the five steamships from Canada and 1,365 Canadians came from England. Edward VIII, in his capacity as King of Canada, officially unveiled the monument.

The ceremony was one of the King's few official duties before he abdicated the throne. In May 2001, the Government of Canada announced the Canadian Battlefield Memorials Restoration Project, a major 30 million Canadian dollar restoration project to restore Canada's memorial sites in France and Belgium, in order to maintain and present them in a respectful and dignified manner. In 2005, the Vimy memorial closed for major restoration work. Veterans Affairs Canada directed the restoration of the memorial in cooperation with other Canadian departments, the Commonwealth War Graves Commission, consultants and specialists in military history.

Queen Elizabeth II rededicated the restored memorial on 9 April 2007 in a ceremony commemorating the 90th anniversary of the battle. Senior Canadian officials and senior French representatives attended the event, along with thousands of Canadian students, veterans of the Second World War and of more recent conflicts, and descendants of those who fought at Vimy Ridge. The rededication ceremony comprised the largest crowd on the site since the 1936 dedication.

The Battle of Vimy Ridge, 9-12 April 1917

Many historians and writers consider the Canadian victory at Vimy a defining moment for Canada, when the country emerged from under the shadow of Britain and felt capable of greatness. Canadian troops also earned a reputation as formidable, effective troops because of the stunning success. But it was a victory at a terrible cost, with more than 10,000 killed and wounded.

The Canadian Corps was ordered to seize Vimy Ridge in April 1917. Situated in northern France, the heavily-fortified seven-kilometre ridge held a commanding view over the Allied lines. The Canadians would be assaulting over an open graveyard since previous French attacks had failed with over 100,000 casualties.

To capture this difficult position, the Canadians would carefully plan and rehearse their attack. To provide greater flexibility and firepower in battle, the infantry were given specialist roles as machine-gunners, rifle-men and grenade-throwers. These same soldiers underwent weeks of training behind the lines using models to represent the battlefield, and new maps crafted from aerial photographs to guide their way. To bring men forward safely for the assault, engineers dug deep tunnels from the rear to the front. Despite this training and preparation, the key to victory would be a devastating artillery barrage that would not only isolate enemy trenches, but provide a moving wall of high explosives and shrapnel to force the Germans to stay in their deep dugouts and away from their machine-guns. "Chaps, you shall go over exactly like a railroad train, on time, or you shall be annihilated," warned Canadian Corps commander Sir Julian Byng.

In the week leading up to the battle, Canadian and British artillery pounded the enemy positions on the ridge, killing and tormenting defenders. New artillery tactics allowed the gunners to first target, then destroy enemy positions. A nearly limitless supply of artillery shells and the new 106 fuse, which allowed shells to explode on contact, as opposed to burying themselves in ground, facilitated the destruction of hardened defences and barbed wire. The Canadian infantry would be well supported when it went into battle with over 1,000 artillery pieces laying down withering, supportive fire.

Attacking together for the first time, the four Canadian divisions stormed the ridge at 5:30am on 9 April 1917. More than 15,000 Canadian infantry overran the Germans all along the front. Incredible bravery and discipline allowed the infantry to continue moving forward under heavy fire, even when their officers were killed. There were countless acts of sacrifice, as Canadians single-handedly charged machine-gun nests or forced the surrender of Germans in protective dugouts. Hill 145, the highest and most important feature of the Ridge, and where the Vimy monument now stands, was captured in a frontal bayonet charge against machine-gun positions. Three more days of costly battle delivered final victory. The Canadian operation was an important success, even if the larger British and French offensive, of which it had been a part, had failed. But it was victory at a heavy cost: 3,598 Canadians were killed and another 7,000 wounded.

The capture of Vimy was more than just an important battlefield victory. For the first time all four Canadian divisions attacked together, men from all regions of Canada were present at the battle. Brigadier-General A.E. Ross declared after the war, "in those few minutes I witnessed the birth of a nation."

Vimy became a symbol for the sacrifice of the young Dominion of Canada. In 1922, the French government ceded to Canada in perpetuity Vimy Ridge, and the land surrounding it. The gleaming white marble and haunting sculptures of the Vimy Memorial (see cover photo), unveiled in 1936, stand as a terrible and poignant reminder of the 11,285 Canadian soldiers killed in France who have no known graves.

The Battle of Passchendaele

October – November 1917

The Battle of Passchendaele is a vivid symbol of the mud, madness and the senseless slaughter of the First World War.

The commander of the British armies in Europe, General Douglas Haig, decided Britain must begin a new offensive. Haig wanted to attack German forces in the Ypres salient — a long-held bulge in the Allied front lines in the Flanders region of Belgium.

The salient had been an active battlefield since 1914. Haig believed if the British could break through the German lines there they could also liberate the occupied ports on the English Channel coast, just north of Ypres, which served as submarine bases for German U-boats.

British Prime Minister David Lloyd George was skeptical of the scheme. Britain only had a small superiority in forces over the enemy. Even if German lines could be broken at Ypres, the Channel ports might not be captured, and the offensive wouldn't end the war, in any case. The only certainty was heavy loss of life. Despite these fears, Haig's plan was approved. The Third Battle of Ypres, as it became known, would begin in July.

The Canadian Corps, Canada's 100,000-man assault force was initially spared involvement in Haig's 1917 campaign. The Corps, fresh from its April victory at Vimy Ridge, was instead assigned the task of attacking Germans occupying the French city of Lens in the hopes that this would draw German resources away from the main battle in the Ypres salient.

In mid-July, as the Canadians prepared to attack Lens, British artillery began a two-week bombardment of a series of scarcely visible ridges rising gently around the salient — including the Passchendaele ridge and the remains of its ruined town — on which the Germans waited.

Previous fighting since 1914 had already turned the area into a barren plain, devoid of trees or vegetation, pockmarked by shell craters.

Earlier battles had also destroyed the ancient Flanders drainage system that once channeled rain water away from the fields. The explosion of millions more shells in the new offensive — accompanied by torrential rain — would quickly turn the battlefield into an apocalyptic expanse: a swampy, pulverized mire, dotted with water-filled craters deep enough to drown a man, all made worse by the churned-up graves of soldiers killed in earlier fighting.

British troops, supported by dozens of tanks and assisted by a French contingent, assaulted German trenches on 31 July. For the next month, hundreds of thousands of soldiers on opposing sides attacked and counterattacked across sodden, porridge-like mud, in an open, grey landscape almost empty of buildings or natural cover, all under the relentless, harrowing rain of exploding shells, flying shrapnel and machine-gun fire. Few gains were made. Nearly 70,000 men from some of Britain's best assault divisions were killed or wounded.

By early September, Haig was under political pressure from London to halt the offensive, but he refused. In September, Australian and New Zealand divisions were thrown into the fight alongside the worn out British forces, but the result was the same: the Allies would bombard, assault and occupy a section of enemy ground only to be thrown back by the counterattacking Germans.

In October, Haig — determined to carry on despite the depletion of his armies and the sacrifice of his soldiers — now turned to the Canadians.

Haig ordered Lieutenant General Arthur Currie, the Canadian Corps' new commander, to bring his four divisions to Belgium and take up the fight around Passchendaele. Currie objected to what he considered a reckless attack, arguing it would cost about 16,000 Canadian casualties for no great strategic gain. Ultimately, however, Currie had little choice. After lodging his protest, he made careful plans for the Canadians' assault.

On 26 October 1917, all four divisions of the Canadian Corps took turns assaulting the Passchendaele ridge — their gains measuring only a few hundred meters each day, despite heavy losses. Under almost continuous rain and shellfire, conditions for the soldiers were horrifying. Troops huddled in waterlogged shell holes, or became lost on the blasted mudscape, not knowing where the front line was that separated Canadian from German positions.

The mud gummed up rifle barrels and breeches, making them difficult to fire. It swallowed up soldiers as they slept. It slowed stretcher-bearers — wading waist-deep as they tried to carry wounded away from the fighting — to a crawl.

Ironically, the mud also saved lives, cushioning many of the shells that landed, preventing their explosion. On 6 November, the Canadians launched their third, large-scale attack on the ridge. They succeeded in capturing it and the ruins of Passchendaele village from the Germans. A final assault, which secured the remaining areas of high ground east of the Ypres salient, was carried out on 10 November — the final day of the more than four-month battle. Nine Victoria Crosses, the British Empire's highest award for military valour, were awarded to Canadians after the fighting.

More than 15,600 Canadians were killed and wounded there — almost exactly the losses predicted by Arthur Currie.

These were among the 275,000 casualties lost overall to the armies under British command at Passchendaele. The Germans suffered another 220,000 killed and wounded. At the end, the point of it all was unclear. In 1918, all the ground gained there by the Allies was evacuated in the face of a looming German assault.

A century later, the Battle of Passchendaele is remembered as a symbol of the worst horrors of the First World War, the sheer futility of much of the fighting, and the reckless disregard by some of the war's senior leaders for the lives of the men under their command.

We Will Remember

Congratulations to the Nova Scotia Nunavut Command of The Royal Canadian Legion

On behalf of the seniors living in care at Braeside and Duncan MacMillan, their families, the Boards of Directors, Staff and Volunteers, we would like to recognize the men and women who make up the membership of our local Legions in Zone 15.

Each of these long term care facilities is supported by the generous programs and services actively pursued by the following branches:

- # 58 Courcellette, Sheet Harbour
- # 120 Four Harbours, Tangier
- # 147 Valley, Upper Musquodoboit

The men and women of these branches provide services to Veterans and their families, in particular, Senior and Veterans Services focusing on health care, social activities, medical support and information.

Thank you to all the Veterans and their families for the sacrifices that you have made so that each and every generation coming after you enjoy a life lived in peace and freedom.

We will not forget.

CAMERON, Bruce

WWI

Bruce was an 18-year-old from Mahone Bay, Nova Scotia when he joined the CEF and was assigned to the 16th Battalion (the Canadian Scottish). He would survive wounds received in October 1915, but he would be killed on June 13, 1916 during the Battle for Hill 62 in the Ypres Salient. Bruce was buried at the Railway Dugouts Burial Ground outside Ypres; however, at some time during the battle for Ypres Salient, the burial ground was shelled by German artillery and his remains were disrupted. Today, "Special Memorial" H 28 can be found at the Railway Dugouts Burial Ground making note of the fact that his remains are buried somewhere in the cemetery.

COGSWELL, Nelson Alexander

WWI

Nelson was born in 1896 in Cape Breton, Nova Scotia. He joined the Army and served with The Canadian Engineers in France. He was wounded and gassed during battles and was evacuated to England to recover. His family was informed he had been killed in action and believed it true until his return to Nova Scotia in 1918. He enlisted again in 1943 but was rejected. Two of his daughters, Marjorie and Melinda, served in Canada during WWII. Nelson passed away in 1965.

DRYSDALE, Omar

WWI

Omar was born on October 2, 1888 in Halifax, Nova Scotia. He joined the 85th Nova Scotia Highlanders on February 18, 1916 and served in Canada, England and France. Private Drysdale remembers going out under machine-gun fire and snipers to attend and dress a wounded soldier in clear sight of the enemy. He completed the dressing still under fire and then on a rubber sheet, dragged him to the nearest trench. His conduct was most gallant both on August 8 and on August 10, 1918 when Omar was in the advance wave and by his constant care of the wounded, saved many lives. Omar served in Canada, England and France. He received the British War Medal, the Victory Medal and the 1914-18 Star. He had six children with his wife, Annie MacLean, and he worked as a mail carrier in Halifax until his retirement. Omar died on February 14, 1982.

Soldier to Soldier

The uniform insignia and the battle equipment may have been different, yet the reason for being there was the same. One soldier fought and sacrificed life and limb so that peace may be protected and regained, the other soldier stood to bring a coffee, a writing pad, the essentials of hope and peace in the chaos of war. One soldier went to the front to face the worst of the worst, the other came as close as possible to serve those who served their country. With great admiration for those who fell, and for those who came back, The Salvation Army salutes and gives thanks for freedom gained at such a price. As an international movement The Salvation Army is honoured to serve "Soldier To Soldier".

GULLAGE, John

WWI & WWII

John was born in Catalina, Newfoundland in 1889. He served in the Merchant Navy during World War I and World War II. Following the sinking of SS Caribou by enemy fire in the Cabot Straight, the SS Burges, under his command, was assigned as a replacement. John remained on the passenger run from North Sydney to Port-aux-Basques through the remaining war years until his retirement in November 1954. He and all three of his sons served during World War Two. Bill and Roland served overseas with the RNR and Joe with the Merchant Navy. In recognition, John was awarded the Officer of the Order of the British Empire by the reigning King of England. John was a member of Sydney Branch # 012 of The Royal Canadian Legion until his death in 1982.

SUTHERLAND, Daniel Hugh

WWI & WWII

Daniel was born in River John, Nova Scotia in 1878. After enlisting in 1916 in the 193rd Battalion, Canadian Expeditionary Force, he was asked to recruit and command an all Black Battalion, the No. 2 Construction Battalion CEF, Canada’s first and only black Battalion which served in Canada, England and France. After the war, he worked in mining in Canada and Mexico then re-settled in River John with his family. When WWII broke out, he was asked to recruit and train a second Battalion of the Pictou Highlanders, headquartered in Stellarton, Nova Scotia. Daniel was active in the community and the local Legion Branch # 108. He married Emily Pugsley in 1912 and they had a son. He died in 1977.

TOBIN, Richard Francis "Rick"

PEACETIME

Rick was born in St. John's, Newfoundland in 1961. He joined the Navy at 18 and sailed on numerous ships in the rough Atlantic seas and served on many tours of duty. He retired in 2002 and spent a year with his family then began working at the Inn on the Lake as a night auditor. In 2005, he again worked with Provincial Aerospace Limited, first as a sensor operator and later as a member of the training division. His work took him around the world to the Middle East and the Caribbean and back to Newfoundland. One of his highlights was to be assigned tasks that took him to the BC coast during the Vancouver Olympic Games in 2010. Rick was a member of Spryfield Legion Branch # 152 for twelve years before he passed away in 2013.
